The past is simple and continuous passive: the car has been repaired. The car was being repaired. There is a perfect passive: the car has just been repaired. The past is perfect passive: The car has been repaired. The future is simply passive: the car will be repaired. The future is perfect passive: the car will be repaired. A real and perfect conditional passive: the car will be repaired. The car would have been repaired. The form of passive voice in English is formed with a verb to be and past participle, which differs for regular verbs (translation, marking) and irregular verbs (taken, cast). Statement: Letter written. This store was open. This will be done on time. The question is: Is the letter written? Was the store open? Will it be done on time? Negative: The letter is not written. The store was not open. It won't be done in time. Continuous is as follows. (Other continuous times are usually used in active voice rather than passive.) Now Playing: A new house is being built on our street. Past: A new house was being built on our street. The agent is not mentioned in all of the above examples. We don't know who wrote the letter or opened the store. Similarly: Flowers were planted in the garden. (We don't know who did it). If we want to say who planted the flowers we mention the agent at the end of the sentence and use the excuse. The flowers were planted by my mother. But: The window was smashed with a stone. (Stone is not an agent. Direct and indirect objects If there are both direct and indirect objects in the active voice (my friend sent me a letter), an indirect object (my friend) rather than a direct object (letter) usually becomes the subject of a passive voice. Active: My friend I got a letter. Passive: A friend of mine sent me a letter. (This form is more in English than the letter was sent to me by a friend of mine.) Similarly: They offer Trevor a place. - Trevor is offered a place. Infinitive without K. In active voice some verbs are then bare infinitive (infinitive without to). In passive form we use most such verbs with an infinitive with K. Active: We have seen how they came. She made him do it. Passive: They were seen to come. It was created to do so. But: They let us go. They let us go. Used passive: 1. If the action is more important, then the agent. A demonstration was held. This theatre was built in 1868. What matters is what happened, not who did it. 2. If the agent is not known. He was offered a job. (Someone offered him a job.) They should be good students. (Some teachers suggest that.) The difference in meaning between a simple and continuous new home is being built on our street. (The house is finished.) A new house is being built on our street. (They're building it these days. it's not finished.) I was introduced to Mrs. Jones when her husband arrived. (Her husband arrived in the middle of the introduction.) When her husband arrived, I met Mrs. Jones. (Her husband came first, and then she introduced me.) Notes This form is characteristic of impersonal and formal style, so you can often find it in public notices, announcements, instructions, or scientific articles. This store speaks English. Visitors are not allowed to smoke. The seal must be removed. In a less formal style, the active voice is more familiar. This store speaks English. We speak English in this store. He was seen at Dover. They saw him in Dover. The seal must be removed. - You have to remove the seal. In English, this form is more common than in many other languages. Alternatively, you can find some structures in English that are not possible in some languages. I was told you were having a baby. It is believed that the crises will soon end. Coming soon.
